

Fermilab Family Open House Attracts 2000

From babies in strollers to their grandparents, about 2000 people of all ages enjoyed science at the Fermilab Family Open House on Sunday, February 13. As part of the World Year of Physics, Fermilab's Education Office invited visitors to explore interactive exhibits, talk with Fermilab scientists, watch cryogenics shows and presentations by people dressed as famous historical scientists, and tour Fermilab's linear accelerator complex.

"Sometimes Fermilab goes out to the neighbors in the community," says Marge Bardeen, head of Fermilab's Education Office. "But this time we invited them to our home, and everyone had a great time."

Text by Lisa Zyga
Photos by Reidar Hahn, Fermilab

